

The Creoles

The Creoles are descendants of British settlers and African slaves. They can be recognized more by their values and way of life rather than by biological manner. Two thirds of the Creole population reside in Belize City. Creole Men, even after slavery, dominated positions in logging crews, and even now dominate civil services.